anti-Sandinista aid

A major demonstration against aid to anti-Sandinista forces is planned for Saturday, at the Ellipse in back of the White House. Civil disobedience at various Washington locations is also planned for Monday. Organizers expect a turnout of 40,000 for the Saturday protest, a spokesman for the coordinating group April Action told the Morning Bulletin.

April Action consists of about 80 groups whose interests include opposition to U.S. aid to anti-government forces in Nicaragua. Among the groups is the "Pledge of Resistance Coalition," with an agenda calling for continuing civil disobedience at the White House and other federal buildings, military installations, the CIA headquarters, the State Department or "other appropriate places." Signers of a "civil disobedience pledge" or a "legal protest pledge" agree to respond to a mobilization signal from coalition leaders. Sources familiar with the campaign say about 50,000 people have signed the pledges.
